MENU

BANKING & FINANCIAL SERVICES

Why Jamie Dimon will be in Nashville next week

JPMorgan Chase CEO Jamie Dimon is coming to Nashville next week for Bunker Lab's Muster Across America tour.

BYRON E. SMALL

By Meg Garner
Reporter, Nashville Business Journal
Jul 30, 2019, 7:56am EDT

Jamie Dimon, CEO of JPMorgan Chase & Co., is coming to Nashville next week, and it isn't to kick off the megabank's local branch expansion.

Instead, Dimon will be a featured guest at Bunker Lab's Muster Across America event on Aug. 8. The day-long event, hosted at the Nashville Public Library's downtown branch, is designed to help veteran entrepreneurs learn how to launch and grow their own businesses, according to a news release.

In addition to small group sessions, the event includes a pitch contest, where entrepreneurs can win as much as $5,000 for their business. Dimon will headline a "fireside chat" later in the day. Admission for military members is free. General admission for non-military members is $45, according to the event's website.

"Together, we'll help veteran entrepreneurs reach their potential as successful business owners," Brad Bowlin, JPMorgan's Nashville private bank chief, said in a statement. "Bunker Labs uniquely harnesses this potential with innovative resources tailored to the needs of veterans."

JPMorgan has a long history with Bunker Labs. In February, the New York-based bank reupped its commitment to the nonprofit, donating $3 million to help Bunker open chapters in all 50 states. Chicago-based Bunker launched its Nashville program four years ago.

T H E L I S T

Largest Veteran-owned Businesses in Nashville

Ranked by 2017 Revenue

| Rank | Name | 2017 Revenue |
|------|------|--------------|
| 1 | Care Line Industries Inc. | $25.00 million |
| 2 | ASE Direct Inc. | $22.44 million |
| 3 | Bestway Services Inc. | $8.93 million |
| | View This List | |

COMPANIES IN THIS ARTICLE

JPMorgan Chase Bank
Manhattan, NY

See full profile  ›

RELATED CONTENT